The Beer of the Week Club

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one Beer of the Week Club to spawn another Beer of the Week Club, a decent respect to the opinions of beer drinkers everywhere requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to enjoy the finest of beers on a weekly basis.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all real men enjoy a fine beer equally, that they are endowed certain unalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of consuming every type of beer that ever existed (A.K.A. that which is Happiness).

Further, to these ends, we declare the existence of the Miami University of Ohio chapter of the Beer of the Week Club on this day, the Twenty Seventh of September, in the year Twenty Hundred and Four Pennies. From this date onward, each Monday, these twelve men together shall split into pairs and, in the following sequence, purchase an original 12-pack of delectable cold beverages, by the choice of the distinguished fellows, in an effort to bring about the Happiness mentioned heretofore. These weekly delights, consisting of a magnificent mix of hops, barley, malt, yeast, water, and other articles, shall be distributed in a hand-to-mouth fashion, with no exceptions. A beer may be repeated in the case that 8 of the 12 men decide it is destiny. If one or more of the men decide that he is not able to consume his brew on the given day, a suitable replacement must be found, but only under extenuating circumstances. In addition, the word “cheers” shall always be mentioned at the aforementioned festivities, in the continuous pursuit of favorable times, gentlemanliness, and to be in accord with this Club’s brotherhood to its parent Club.
